Reducing Your Risk of Scleroderma

by Rosalyn Carson-DeWitt, MD

En Español (Spanish Version)

The development of scleroderma has been linked to various environmental exposures. One way to possibly reduce your risk of scleroderma is to avoid these exposures, such as silica dust that is found in coal mines.

REFERENCES:

Scleroderma Foundation website. Available at: http://www.scleroderma.org/.

Previous | Next